WASHINGTON, Dec. 11.—There is a afe vault about six feet square in the Then it was at once discovered that the young woman was locked up and there was consternation in the store. Mr. Slater, the manager of the cetablishment, knew the combination, but in the excutement of the moment it excaped her mind entirely. Meanwhile the young woman in the vault was rajidly breathing up the few cebis feet of air at her disposal. Her companions outside were solbling and calling on her not to be frightened. It was a question to engage a safe burglar or wait until Mr. Homain, who rents a part of the vault and had the combination, could be found. The messengers dispatched failed to find him. At last when the friends of the young woman were about to give up, Mr. Charles E. Foster, the owner of the building, who also had the combination, appeared and opened the safe, and the imprisoned girl staggered out and foll in the arms of her friends. She was looked up more than an hour and was in danger of suffocating when relief came. the young woman was locked up and

A Monster Organization.
Sr. Louis, Dec. 11.—The coming cession of the American Federation of Labor, which will convene in this city to-day at 12 o'clock, will in all probability be the most largely attended and important session yet held by the organization. It is claimed that the association now represents about half million workingmen in the United States. The carpenters are said to have the largest representation, having a membership of about 60,000. The cigar-makers, iron-moulders and printers come next with a representation of about 40,000 each. Numerically, it is the strongest labor organization in the United States. The meetings of the present session will be open to outsiders, unless there arises some question which the membership deem best to discuss in private. Among the more important measures to be discussed, the much mooted eight hour law will come up for its share of consideration, and it is thought that measures will be arranged for a general attempt to enforce the law.
